TITLE: Komustahan/FGD of DKST and Sec Science Coordinators

BACKGROUND/RATIONALE:

Science is important to everyone. School science education should support the development of scientific literacy in all students as well as motivate them to pursue careers in science, technology, and engineering.

Science is useful because of its links to technology and industry, which, from a national perspective, are areas of high priority for development. Science provides ways of making sense of the world systematically. It develops students' scientific inquiry skills, values and attitudes, such as objectivity, curiosity, and honesty and habits of mind including critical thinking. All these are useful to the individual student for his own personal development, future career, and life in general. These skills, values, attitudes, and dispositions are likewise useful to the community that an individual student belongs to, and are further useful to the country that he lives in. The learning of science is also important for the nation's cultural development and preservation of its cultural identity. Science is most useful to a nation when it is utilized to solve its own problems and challenges, keeping a nation's cultural uniqueness and peculiarities intact. Thus in many countries, science teaching and learning is linked with culture.

It is in this premise that there is a need to revisit, review and discuss the program involving Science.

OBJECTIVES:

The activity aims to:

1. conduct review and discuss the program as to its implementation,
2. determine and discuss issues and challenges encountered in the implementation of the program, and
3. create appropriate solutions and interventions to address gaps and issues.

PARTICIPANTS:

Participants of the activity will be the following:

- 1 Education Program Supervisor
- 33 District Key Science Teachers (DKST)
- 122 Sec Science Coordinators
- 3 members of technical working committee
- QATAME
